Defense Of Insanity In Jones Case Receives A Setback

The proceedings in the Jones murder case this forenoon were made singularly interesting by the fight which was made about the admission of the deposition of Mrs. J. S. Reed. After a strenuous battle Deputy Attorney General Peters came out victorious and the defense lost one of the strongest pieces of evidence it had to establish its insanity theory.

The defense opened its case this morning with asking permission to read to the jury the deposition of Mrs. Reed. This deposition was taken in September, 1903, as Mrs. Reed was shown by a doctor's certificate to be unable on account of old age and illness to attend. In this deposition Mrs. Reed stated that she had known Jones when he was five or six years of age. At that time he had suffered from a fever, she thought it was typhoid, which had affected his mental condition. This document was used as evidenced by the defense at the trial of Jones for the murder of Mrs. Parmenter. Since that time Mrs. Reed died.

Peters objected to the reading of the deposition on numerous grounds. He argued that it had been taken for the Parmenter case alone, and also that there was no subpoena in evidence showing that Mrs. Reed was unable to appear in court. He further contended that the deposition contained much immaterial matter and held that Mrs. Reed was not competent to testify about Jones' illness or about his age.

A. G. M. Robertson contended that the deposition had not been taken expressly for the Parmenter case. He had spoken to Attorney General Andrews telling him that he would file a motion that a general deposition be taken to be used in the cases then pending against the defendant. It was practically taken by consent. Peters held that the document should not be read as the prosecution would have no chance to deny or overcome the testimony contained in it as Mrs. Reed was now dead.

Robertson said that the prosecution had had a chance to, and had obtained cross-interrogatories.

The court ordered that Attorney General Andrews be called throw light on the matter.

Andrews soon arrived on the scene. He said that he had no recollection of any agreement such as referred to by Robertson. He had fought the motion for the deposition, but it had been allowed by Judge Gear.

At this point the court records were referred to. Robertson held that they showed that the deposition had been taken before either of the cases pending against Jones had been set definitely for trial and that it might be used in one case as well as the other.

Judge Robinson stated that there was no record of any such stipulation, while it would have been an easy matter to record such a thing. He sustained the objection to the reading of the deposition, and this important piece of evidence, which would be of extreme value in establishing an insanity theory, was lost for the defense.

The defense still persevered on the insanity line. Representative J. D. Lewis of Hilo was called on the stand. He stated that he first became acquainted with Jones thirty-four years ago when the two were boarding at Dr. Gallek's school in this city. Jones was a poor scholar and seemed very dull.

BERGIN LIQUOR CASE.

W. Bergin, charged with selling liquor without license at Ocean View, Waikiki, is again before the Police Court this afternoon, the case having gone over from this morning. A desperately hard fight is being made by both sides in the case. It is said that business rivalry between the defendant and one of the witnesses for the prosecution was the origin of the matter anyway.
